

Housing Affordability Must Be Addressed Locally and Nationally

California's housing market is facing a crisis. The lack of affordable housing is driving up rents and home prices, making it difficult for many families to find a place to call home. This is particularly true in urban areas where demand is high and supply is low. The state government has taken steps to address this issue, such as increasing funding for affordable housing programs and encouraging local governments to adopt more pro-housing policies. However, more needs to be done at both the state and national levels to ensure that everyone has access to safe, stable, and affordable housing.

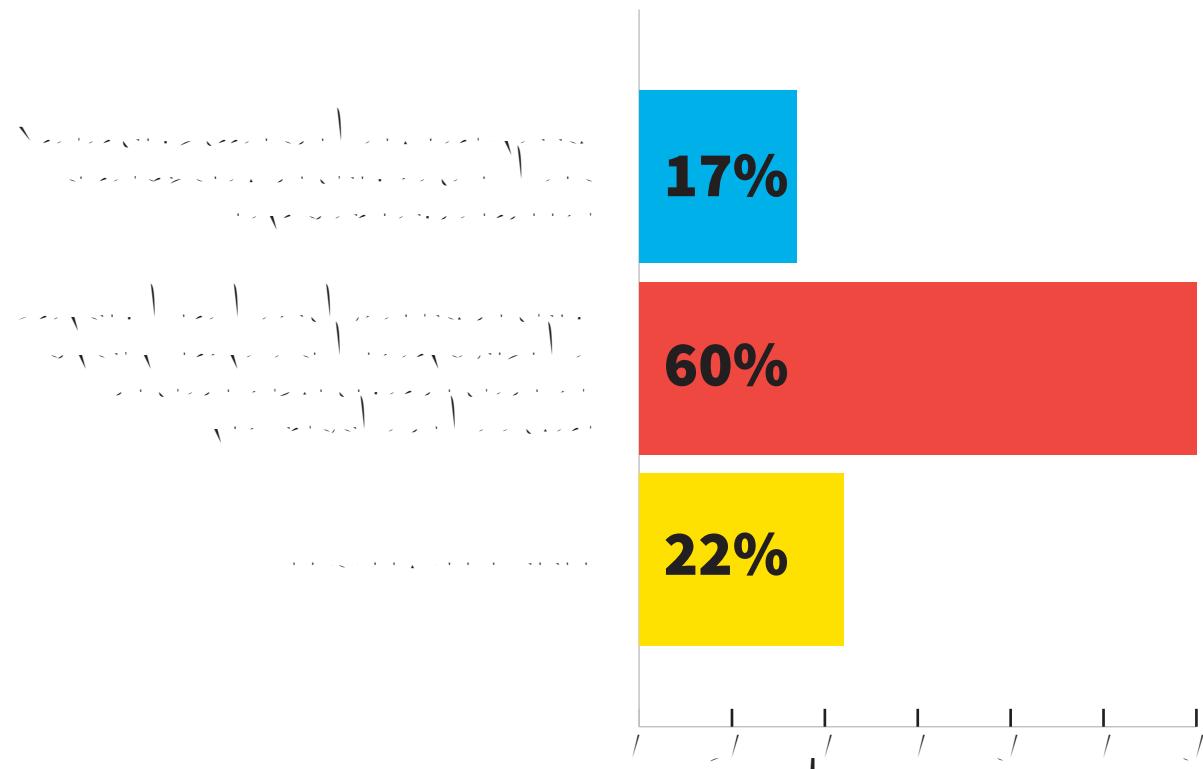

Local governments play a critical role in addressing the housing crisis by adopting policies that encourage the development of affordable housing units. This can include zoning changes, tax incentives, and other financial assistance programs. By working together, we can create a more equitable and sustainable housing market for all.
