Housing Affordability Must Be Addressed Locally and Nationally

It's harder than ever for American families to find a home that meets their need at a price they can afford. Policymakers at all levels of government are looking for ways to provide more affordable homes, whether through rental housing opportunities. In response, the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) is offering a 10-point plan, which proposes policy solutions that can be implemented at the local, state and federal levels to address the root of the problem, the impediment to increasing the nation's housing supply.

Below is a brief look at economic markers, as well as district residents' response to the question about important housing topics.
